

Afflatus Creations

Vol. 1, No. 4

Page – 20-24

---

Democracy My Foot Dr. Dalvir Singh Gahlawat

What if you are democracy?

I am still alive

Do you know?

Who am I?

I am O'Dawyer

In the form of

Democratic Administrator

You are on bend stretch

When I become brute

Oh! Democracy

You are my foot

Your all components

become weak

when I am on peak

When I order

you become meek and moot

Oh! Democracy

You are my foot

Though being powerful neither hopeful

nor cheerful

Though I am not insightful rein you by hoot

Oh! Democracy

You are my foot

Oh! Coward democracy

Go down the drain

before you slain

I shall never allow you to mount and sit

Oh! Democracy

You are my foot

Where is your bosom of

So broad and magnanimous?

When you are crashed out to “Right of Speech”

Seemingly weaker than 1828

Where you advanced with

“Simon Go back”

Your tongue was in my boot

Oh! Democracy

You are my foot

Bone of my sorrow

Dr Dalvir Singh Gahlawat

I looked for salvation in physical body or representivity rather than in future immortality

I preferred the physical Universe of nature rather than true self or

‘power of my creature’

I entangled in the cycle of generation rather than to get rid of copulation I ate the forbidden fruit rather than to follow his route Consequently penalty declared by God
I was expelled from my Abode

Futility of war
Dr Dalvir Singh Gahlawat

Sitting with an exuberant mood Everything undergoes a change of burst Father and brothers are killed in a war
A great responsibility is thrust to defend people from slavery of czar, to avenge the death of dear first

Mother incites to take sword, to lead the army against the forged, to honor the memory of deceased, to keep unblemished the sword to challenge the male supremacy of warlords Continued in the collective insight of hill abode

Full of tension and pathos Gauntlets to inspire the mammoths Unite them to inflict crushing defeat on foes Calls upon to free the country and friends Gathers to revenge the Prince killed in wars Hiding marriage dream to be solemnized on the mars

Defensive war leads to a series of bloody confrontations Continue for years, Culminating in the victory Loses comrades and many powerful fighters Consequences turn into favor of mightier Surviving forces are tired of test Sanctioned leave to rest Visit to their families' nest Celebrate the task as a feast Leave the opponent a least Stand in tent as a guest

She too decides to go home to take a bath in river alone to breathe in the tranquility of moon to take rest in nature's loom to be calm and serene, avoiding doom surviving the idea of celebrating honeymoon

Arch-enemy, severely wounded Pride brushed, surreptitiously Follows her, determining to attack
When she starts bathing without escorts With his deep rooted sense of revenges malafide intention he manages

Makes out the sense of fear Challenges arrogant male warrior Forces him to bite the dust Vanquished neighboring ruler, who had killed her father and brothers in aggravate failure

In the denouement, one can watch bodies on bodies hated one another Intensely found with nobody to weep for them

Dr. Dalvir Singh Gahlawat is a retired Inspector Delhi Police. Born in a small hamlet (Raipur) of District Jhajjar, Haryana, India. During his service he got M.A. Political Science, M.A English, M. Phil. English and PhD in English. He visited all over India and abroad and attended above fifty UGC/BPRD sponsored National and International Seminars. He chaired sessions at various International level seminars and also remained ‘Resource Person’ and ‘Key Note Speaker, ‘Guests of Honor in these seminars. Presently, he has more than fifty Research papers, including poems and short stories. His Poems “Boat of Life”, and “I am Politics” were selected the best poems in the International Poetry Fest -2011 held at Guntur, AP, on 11.11.2011 and 21-22 September 2017 respectively. He also attended 42nd All India Police Science Congress held at Gangtok, Sikkim from 15-17 Feb, 2012 and presented his papers there. He has nine books to his credit. He also took part in National Human Rights Debate Competition at National level.