

Poem by Manoj Kumar Panda

Moons Rhapsody

Moon, a mirror in the celestial sea,
Reflecting dreams, and humanity.
Your light, a cloak of mystery and might,
Illuminates the night, with gentle light.

With every phase, a new face is shown,
A labyrinth of emotions, forever sown.
You weave a tale of love, and heartache too,
A constant duality, forever true.

Your beams, a solace, in the darkest night,
A guiding force, that shines with gentle light.
You watch, a silent witness, to all our strife,
A keeper of secrets, and a teller of life.

In your light, we find our way,
Through the darkness, to a brand new day.
You're a symbol of hope, a beacon in the night,
A celestial guide, that shines with all your might.

With every glance, a new story's told,
Of love, of heartache, of dreams, and gold.
You're a mystery, a magic spell,
That binds us all, and forever dwells.

Bio Note:

Manoj Kumar Panda, born in 1997, is a multifaceted talent with a passion for writing. He completed his master degrees in Political Science . Panda writes in Odia, English, and Hindi, crafting poems, stories, and literary critiques. His poem "The Allusion Of Silence" has been translated into 29 languages and is engraved on a church wall in Romania. Elected as a Youth Volunteer to UNA-USA in 2019, he represents India and attends peace conferences in neighboring countries. As the founding editor of Suryodaya Literary Foundation, Panda promotes literary excellence. He's dedicated to charitable work, including blood donation and tree plantation. Despite his achievements, he remains humble and committed to a simple life. Panda's work has gained international recognition. His writing touches hearts worldwide. He's a true advocate for peace and social causes. His foundation supports literary growth. Panda's passion inspires many. He's a shining example of dedication and compassion. His story motivates others to pursue their passions.

Ada, Balasore Odisha
Contact -9340045335