

2 Poems by Bharati Nayak

My Creativity Is My Refuse

When I feel hurt by words and behaviour, rough and acidic
That lacerate my heart deep within
I take refuge in my creativity
There my pen weeps instead of my eyes.
When I feel alone and forlorn
My pen and paper call me with love
I get a safe shelter under them
I pour out my emotions without restraints
There my words flow rather than my eyes
In their company I feel so secure .
To the loud voice, condemnation or injustice
My pen and paper answer them in silence
They heal my wounds like a soothing balm
They guide me to an enlightened world.
Sometimes I find nobody to tell my success story
I take to my pen and papers and scribble down few lines
To motivate myself which give me courage to stride ahead.
Pen and papers are my best friends
They are friends in my need
They wipe out my bruises and tears
They are selfless and Never ask for anything in return.
I hope my journey will always be joyful and smooth
With my faithful friends Pen and Papers.

High Time To Go

You said, it is high time
I should go.
I said to myself
It is high time
I should go.
Life turns its leaves
Chapters write themselves
Contacts and relations
Small wishes and big dreams
Jostle for space
Dreams remain always dreams
Words remain unsaid
Silence says its words
Half said sentences
Write full meaning on hearts.
@ Bharati Nayak

Bio

Bharati Nayak, is an internationally recognized bilingual poet, critique and translator from Bhubaneswar, India. Her poems have been published in about hundred books and journals. . She has published three poetry books- 1-Padma Paada (Odia language) 2-Words Are Such Perfect Traitors 3-A Day for Myself. She has co-authored three books namely Radical Rhythm ,vol-1, Vol-2 and Vol-3 and worked as the Editor for Radical Rhythm Vol-3.

A regular writer at popular website www.poemhunter.com ,she is placed among top 500 world poets and has been offered a title 'Poetic Basil' .

She has been conferred with Sahitya Lahari award by International Cosmos Society, India in 2018 and Star Ambassador of World Poetry And Art Philosophique Poetica International Award in Literature in 2019.