

Mother Nature

Mother nature, independent of everyone
Provides everything to her children
Showers unconditional love,
Supports life, maintains ecological balance.
Her creations, plants and animals,
Thrives under her motherly care.

Ancient man adored and enjoyed nature,
Never caused any damage, celebrated her.
Sustained the beauty of the geosphere.
The hydrosphere was pure and unaltered.
Even the biosphere was lasting.

Now reverse is the condition of mother nature:
Advancement in science and technology
Tortures nature, causes pollution.
Deforestation results in scanty rainfall.
Climate change rises temperature,
Polar ice melts, sea level increases.

Mother nature sheds tears, for
Whole nature is under threat.
Protecting nature is the need of the hour.
Let us join hands in preserving mother nature.
Let us keep the planet earth healthy, for
Survival of future generations is in our hands.

Binote:

Dr. S. Florence is a Professor in the Department of English at Annamalai University, Tamil Nadu, with over 23 years of experience in teaching and research. She holds M.A., M.Sc. (Chemistry), B.Ed., and Ph.D. qualifications and specializes in American Literature. Her academic and research interests extend to feminist and environmental concerns, diaspora, identity, multiculturalism, and the representation of women and marginalised voices in literature. She has presented and participated in numerous national and international conferences, seminars, symposia, and workshops, and has made significant contributions to literary scholarship through her research publications. Her work includes studies of American, Indian, diasporic, and contemporary literature, with particular attention to questions of identity, gender, human relationships, alienation, nature, and social concerns. She has guided 50 M.Phil./M.E./M.Sc. research projects and 19 Ph.D. scholars, with seven Ph.D. scholars currently under her guidance. Her publication record includes 81 international and five national journal articles. In addition to her teaching and research responsibilities, Dr. Florence serves as the Nodal Officer for the Maulana Azad National Fellowship (MANF) Scheme at Annamalai University. She is also a published poet, with her creative work appearing alongside her extensive academic contributions.